On that day the root of Jesse shall stand as a signal to the peoples; the nations shall inquire of him, and his dwelling shall be glorious. -Isaiah 11:10

Around a month before the birth of our first child, Tiffany and I were up to the same thing as any other young couple in a similar situation. We were doing the best we could to ready ourselves for what was coming; an absolute and forever disruption to our lives. We read what we could of the recommended baby books, and baby proofed the house. I even mapped out the fastest route to the hospital during rush hour. We packed a bag stuffed with a few bottles, books, a change of clothes and other assorted belongings necessary ready for the moment when everything changes.

We lived in Atlanta's Virginia-Highlands; sharing a townhouse with two other tenants in one of the most desirable neighborhoods in the city. There was no nursery in this small one-bedroom duplex and knew we needed more space, but this was where the baby would first come home. Baby clothes, toys, and books began to accumulate, much like the outpouring grace when St. Paul's gave us a shower for Wesley. When Alban was born, I brought home some blankets and hats so that our dog Fowler would know his scent when he came home. And we went to the hospital two or three times before it finally happened... after a long pack walk through the woods.

I imagine I wasn't the first dad to believe I had everything down at the hospital. The nurses taught me how to change and care for baby and momma. It wasn't until we brought Alban home in his little outfit with matching bowtie when everything became "real." I vividly remember pacing around during those long infinite nights where tiredness was a chronic state of being, trying to get my baby to stop crying; wailing is a more appropriate use of the word.

Our saving grace came from some neighbors who had put a rocking chair on the street. It was a family who had rocked four babies in this same chair. We brought this chair home and it was the one place I could sit and lay tiny Alban in my arms, with the background of the white noise machine, and rocked back and forth until his crying subsided. It was, and is, the greatest satisfaction to see the eyes of babies finally became heavy and they drift off sleep. This was just the beginning; a foretaste of parenthood.

Thus, I believe, is the Advent experience: preparing for the coming of God's kingdom by practicing its ways and doing so with such intention and purpose that something happens. We begin to catch glimpses of it here and now, as if the illusion of reality is already beginning to fade and a new and delightful light of the world is breaking through the darkness. In Advent, the people of Christ live the way of Christ together. We wait for the kingdom to come and manifest it here and now.

And Advent can be continual. Martin Luther believed the incarnation and cross was one event; the wood of the manger is the wood of the cross. Christ's coming and presence disrupts life and history where nothing will ever be the same. God came, and still comes to all people in their darkest hour to birth faith and increases it. We gather on Christmas Eve, at the most inconvenient hour, when we are all tired, as the Blessed Mary was, or any new parent. We share in the joyful hope of our deepest hopes and yearnings for God's immeasurable goodness.

I love the season of Advent for many reasons, but it always helps me consider how God incarnate changes everything about daily life. It is a time to consider the maternal nature of God; a presence who is gentle, tender, kind and nurturing. The kind of love and an advent that has no end. Amen.

Austin

AN ADVENT POEM

The Fist
By Mary Oliver

There are days
when the sun goes down
like a fist,
though of course

if you see anything
in the heavens
in this way
you had better get

your eyes checked
or, better, still,
your diminished spirit.
The heavens

have no fist,
or wouldn't they have been
shaking it
for a thousand years now,

and even
longer than that,
at the dull, brutish
ways of mankind—

heaven's own
creation?
Instead: such patience!
Such willingness

to let us continue!
To hear,
little by little,
the voices—

only, so far, in
pockets of the world—
suggesting
the possibilities

of peace?
Keep looking.
Behold, how the fist opens
with invitation.

Imagery From sunset to sunrise,
Moral direction
From violence to peace
Invitation-presence of hope

How Can We Observe Advent at Home?

By Claire Hasselle

On December 1 the season of Advent began. Social media posts will overflow with beautiful, meaningful ways to celebrate the Christmas season (AKA Advent, the Christmas season, doesn't actually start until December 25th.) Sometimes, when I see photos or activities that other parents do with their kids, I feel less than adequate. Our days are messy, unpredictable and for the most part, way too short to get everything done.

Keeping Advent traditions like a daily Advent countdown chain, a Jesse Tree or an Advent devotion every night is mostly unrealistic. If I tried to do these things daily, it would probably bring a lot of stress to my family, rather than the positive spiritual formation I'm aiming for. Still, I strive and pray to make meaningful traditions in my family that help us all draw nearer to God through this very important season of Advent. This season is supposed to be spent in quiet wonder and expectation of what's to come, not stressing out over every single thing we don't get the chance to do, right?

Prepare the Way of the Lord Advent literally means "the coming." This season is about preparation, not performance or perfection. We are preparing our hearts to welcome Christ in his coming — first through setting the ground to understand the story of the incarnation as he came to Bethlehem, then in grateful awareness of how he has come to us in our own salvation story and in holy anticipation as we look to Christ's second coming. As John the Baptist cried out, "Prepare ye the way of the Lord!" in anticipation of Christ's manifestation to the world, we can mark Advent in simple ways that remind us and others that we are preparing the way of the Lord. In Advent we prepare ourselves to meet Christ afresh as Savior and Lord.

So, with crazy unapparelled schedules, various ages around the dinner table and fresh emotions lingering from daily encounters, how can we walk through Advent, preparing the way of the Lord? Below are a few simple suggestions for living out this beautiful and peaceful season in real life.

Advent Candles & Wreath

Create a space for a simple Advent wreath with candles this year. Each evening, or just once a week, turn off all the lights nearby and light the correct number of candles for the week. This can be coupled with a simple prayer or a simple song. This is a very simple way to mark Advent that engages even the youngest child. There will be take home devotionals and resources for this available at the Advent Fair.

A Simple Prayer

Pray the collect for each week of Advent. A collect is simply a prayer that can gather the thoughts of the congregation or family. A collect highlights the theme of a particular day or week. You can find Advent collects in the Book of Common Prayer on pages 211 and 212. You can repeat the prayer each night for the week or pray it Sunday night at dinner. Maybe breakfast is the only time you are all together around the table—pray it then! If you have time, you can re-write the collect in words that everyone in the family can relate to and understand. Even before you start the car on the way to school, a deep breath and a prayer can be a tangible way to invite the Holy Spirit into your daily lives as a family.

A Simple Song

My kids love to sing, "O Come, O Come Emmanuel." When we light our Advent candles, we sing this each time (that may be only once or twice a week and that's okay!) The first week of Advent, we sing one verse. The second week, we sing verses one and two. By the end of Advent last year, my kids know all four verses by heart and love this simple way to mark time until the birth of Christ.

Purple Paper Napkins or Tablecloths

The liturgical color of Advent is purple (or blue), which signifies royalty (our King Jesus!) and penitence as we prepare our hearts for his coming. Buy purple or blue paper napkins to use during Advent, or if you have one, use a purple or blue tablecloth or runner. This can be a simple, but important, reminder of the season of Advent.

Prayer Cards

Pray together as a family during Advent. Before Advent begins, gather 24 index cards and write the names of 24 people, countries, unreached people groups, loved ones, friends or family members you know are in need. Each day when you gather with your family, choose one card and pray for the person or need on the card. For some families, this rhythm of daily prayer might be overwhelming. Instead, choose four loved ones to pray for, one for each Sunday of Advent (or the evening you are all able to eat together). Beginning to pray together as a family can yield beautiful growth for each person and bring the family closer together.

Nativity

If you have a nativity set, or creche, set it up in a common area. Set the Holy Family across the room. Each Sunday during Advent, or each time you remember, move the Holy Family closer to the manger as we travel closer to Jesus' birth. Hide baby Jesus until Christmas Eve and have the kids find him.

These are just a few ideas to get your family started. In the Hasselle household we do a little of each as we are able, each day holds new challenges. We do the best we can and we fall short many days. However, the focus is making sure our kiddos understand how

Advent Prayer for Family

*God of Love,
Your son, Jesus, is your greatest gift to us.
He is a sign of your love.
Help us walk in that love
during the weeks of Advent,
As we wait and prepare for his coming.
We pray in the name of Jesus, our Savior.
Amen.*

important it is to be quiet, listen and prepare our hearts for the coming of the Christ child. My goal is for my children to understand, and feel, something special and life-changing is headed our way. It is our responsibility to prepare ourselves to receive Christ and do our best to follow the way.
